The Maine Juvenile Law Society (mjls@maine.edu) focuses on the interactions that occur between juveniles and the legal system. Through facilitating group discussions on and educating other students about the overall juvenile justice system, MJLS works to raise awareness about relevant concerns as well as benefits that could come with having a separate system for juveniles. The MJLS achieves these goals through community meetings featuring professors, students, and local attorneys.

The Maine Law Basketball Association (lawbball@maine.edu) was established in 2009. The group's membership cuts across all classes, genders, and skill levels, and there is one unifying attribute of its members: an emphasis on fun and comity. We are dedicated to helping students achieve a life/work balance while at school; fostering networking; and honing teamworking skills.

The Maine Law Information Privacy Association (mainelaw.infoprivacy@maine.edu) provides Maine Law students with information about current topics and trends in information privacy law. The organization also helps to share information with students about the Maine Law Certificate in Information Privacy, and general information about the International Association of Privacy Professionals (IAPP). The group helps students to network and learn more about employment in the privacy industry in Maine, New England, and the United States.

Maine Law Soccer (lawathletics@maine.edu) is a group of students who get together throughout the school year to play pick up soccer in a league. The team typically consists of those who show an active interest by reaching out to the student group president, but anyone interested in getting together to play soccer is welcome to join.

The Multicultural Law Society (multicultural@maine.edu) focuses on issues impacting underrepresented ethnic groups, including Maine’s refugee population. We are passionate about equal rights and fair treatment for everyone. We seek to create a forum for the community to address legal barriers affecting multicultural groups; educate ourselves and our classmates on the disproportionate impact of the current legal practices on communities of color; engage with community leaders to help meet the needs of the under-represented; and inspire current college and high school students to consider a career in law.

The Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity, International (phialphadeltalaw@maine.edu) is a professional law fraternity advancing integrity, compassion, and courage through service to the student, the school, the profession, and the community. It has 60 members in the State of Maine alone. The fraternity encourages philanthropy and charity events. It consists of a number of mentoring programs, and there is an annual conference and mock trial competitions open to 1Ls.

The purpose of the Student Animal Legal Defense Fund (saldf@maine.edu) is to inform the Maine Law community about current legal issues in animal rights and animal welfare law. We also seek to educate and carry out projects for organizations involved in animal welfare/rights.

The Student Mental Health Alliance (sba@maine.edu) works towards eliminating all forms of mental health stigma and advocates on behalf of students on issues of mental health and wellbeing. SMHA provides the legal and general community with information about current topics and trends in the intersectionality between mental health and law while raising awareness of mental health issues amongst law students, legal professionals, and general members of the community in which students will professionally serve.

The Women's Law Association (wla@maine.edu) was developed in response to the increased awareness of the impact of the law on women and the impact of the growing number of women attorneys on the law. Through its educational activities, the WLA encourages the development of a network among women at Maine Law; women practitioners in all branches of the legal field; women in the judiciary; and organizations in the state that are concerned with the issues affecting women.
Student Organizations

The American Constitution Society (ACS@maine.edu) works for positive change by shaping debate on vitaly important legal and constitutional issues through development and promotion of high impact ideas to opinion leaders and the media. ACS strives to make a difference in the constitutional, legal, and public policy debates that shape our democracy.

The Business Law Association (bla@maine.edu) aims to provide a forum for law students interested in business and corporate law, information concerning business law courses, programs, and future careers in the field, and promote an understanding of current legal and corporate issues.

The Energy and Environmental Law Society (EELS@maine.edu) provides law students a forum to discuss, understand, and gain access to the fields of not only environmental law, but also to the Maine lawyers and employers active in these and related fields. Environmental and energy law are remarkably broad and include areas often viewed separately. Such areas include land use, real estate, torts, state and local government, administrative law, food and animal law, climate change, ocean and coastal law, and marine law. EELS, in coordination with E2Tech, organizes fundraising opportunities, educational panel discussions, and community events to promote engagement.

The Federalist Society (federalistsociety@maine.edu) is a group of conservatives and libertarians interested in the current state of the legal order. It is founded on the principles that the state exists to preserve freedom; that the separation of governmental powers is central to our Constitution; and that it is emphatically the province and duty of the judiciary to say what the law is, not what it should be. The Society seeks to promote an awareness of these principles & to further their application through its activities.

The Finch Society (finchsociety@maine.edu) focuses on connecting law students with rural and small town practitioners to provide a place for students to learn more about what rural and small town legal practice is like. The Finch Society’s goals are to encourage law students to pursue careers in rural and small town Maine. Access to legal resources is vital for all Americans and all Mainers, and the Finch Society hopes to increase this access by providing information and resources to students so that they feel confident practicing the law in rural, regional, and small town Maine.

If/When/How (lsrj@maine.edu) trains, networks, and mobilizes law students and legal professionals to work within and beyond the legal system to champion reproductive justice. In collaboration with communities, organizations, and movements, we work to ensure all people - especially those most likely to face reproductive injustice - have the ability to decide if, when, and how to create and sustain a family. The Maine Law chapter is one of over seventy law student chapters of the national If/When/How organization.

The International Law Society (ils@maine.edu) is an academic and social group interested in public international law (the law between nations and international organizations), law internationally (laws within different nations), and international affairs. On-campus events normally revolve around a guest speaker on an international law topic, but ILS also helps students learn about study abroad programs, assists newly arrived foreign law students, and sponsors needy children overseas.

The LGBT+ Law & Policy Group (lawlgbt@maine.edu) serves as an educational, political, and social group for the LGBT community at Maine Law and is dedicated to the inclusion of all people who are interested in furthering the goals of the LGBT community. We sponsor an array of events that increase awareness of both the issues that impact LGBT people and the unique legal concerns of the LGBT community.

Maine Association for Public Interest Law (mapil@maine.edu) is a student group focused on public interest law. The group is committed to mobilizing the next generation of lawyers to be committed to equal justice. To achieve this we offer opportunities for pro bono hours and community service opportunities in law school. We engage with surrounding agencies that serve the poorest and most vulnerable populations. We also have an annual auction to raise money for fellowships.
