The University of Maine School of Law

The University of Maine School of Law is the only law school in Maine, offering the J.D. (Juris Doctor), the post-professional LL.M. (Master of Laws), and the J.S.D. (Doctor of the Science of Law) degrees. Maine Law is committed to educational and scholarly excellence; to justice and the public interest; to professionalism, integrity, and high ethical standards; and to serving as a resource for the entire state. A rigorous core curriculum is augmented by Maine Law's strengths in environmental and oceans law, intellectual property and technology law, business and commercial law, international law, clinical programs, trial advocacy, and more. Maine Law prepares graduates to succeed in a global economy and to excel in a wide variety of careers in private and public sectors in Maine and throughout the world.

As a public institution, Maine Law takes seriously its responsibilities to the State of Maine and its citizens. Students and faculty advance the economic and social well-being of Maine through extensive research, policy development, clinical programs, internships, externships, and public interest fellowships. Graduates hold prominent leadership positions in law, government, business, and civic society. Located in the beautiful coastal city of Portland, the Law School is accredited by the American Bar Association and is a charter member of the Association of American Law Schools.

Aria Eee ’94
L. Kinvin Wroth Distinguished Alumna Award Recipient

Aria Eee serves as the executive director of Maine’s Board of Overseers of the Bar. Her primary responsibilities include assisting the Board in its fiduciary obligations, advising Maine lawyers on ethical concerns, and presenting legal education programs.

Prior to her appointment as the Board’s executive director, Aria served for many years in the Bar Counsel’s office. Aria began her career as a National Association of Public Interest Law (NAPIL) fellow assisting Passamaquoddy Tribal clients and then as counsel for the Passamaquoddy Tribe’s Housing Authority (Pleasant Point). She was a solo practitioner in Washington County before serving for several years as an assistant attorney general.

As an adjunct professor, Aria teaches Professional Responsibility at the University of Maine School of Law. Aria is a member of the American Bar Association, the Maine State Bar Association, the Gignoux Inn of Court, and various affinity bar groups. She graduated from the University of Alabama and the University of Maine School of Law.

Mary L. Bonauto
Keynote Speaker

Since 1990, Mary Bonauto has been an attorney and civil rights project director at GLBTQ Legal Advocates & Defenders (GLAD). GLAD works in the New England states and nationally to secure equality and equity under law for LGBTQ people and people living with HIV, and to challenge systems and policies that have historically disadvantaged LGBTQ people, people of color, and people disenfranchised by their converging identities.

Mary began her legal career at Portland’s Mittel & Hefterman (now Mittel Arena) in 1987. She left for the opportunity to do full-time LGBTQ civil rights work, including enforcement of the second in the nation law forbidding sexual orientation discrimination. Her recent work in Maine and beyond includes challenging the transgender military ban, addressing anti-LGBTQ discrimination as discrimination based on sex, defending conversion therapy bans, updating family laws, furthering student and parent rights in school contexts, engaging the juvenile justice and child welfare systems, and litigation addressing free speech and the free exercise of religion.

Mary’s work in Maine has supported families and their children, ranging from domestic partnership recognition for University of Maine faculty and staff in 1996 to serving on the executive committee to win the freedom to marry on the ballot in 2012. With co-counsel, Mary secured Law Court victories allowing same-sex couples to serve as co-guardians (2003), to be recognized as de facto parents (2004), to adopt jointly (2007), and secure respect for their out-of-state marriages (2015). In 2014, GLAD won a groundbreaking Law Court ruling requiring that transgender students be respected for who they are at school.

Mary successfully argued for equal access to marriage for same-sex couples nationwide before the U.S. Supreme Court in Obergefell v. Hodges in 2015. Prior to Obergefell, Mary was co-counsel in Vermont litigation leading to the nation’s first civil union law (1999) and lead counsel in the Massachusetts case which broke the historic barrier on same-sex couples marrying (2003), as well as litigating and consulting on cases and legislative efforts for marriage equality across the country. Mary led GLAD’s challenges to the federal Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA), won the first District and Circuit Court rulings invalidating it, and coordinated amicus briefs in U.S. v. Windsor at the Supreme Court (2013).

Mary serves on the Chief Justice’s Justice For Children Task Force, and served on the Juvenile Justice Reinvestment Task Force (2019-20). She is a MacArthur Fellow and lecturer at Harvard Law School. She graduated from Hamilton College and Northeastern University School of Law.

Pro Bono Service

Lawyers have an ethical and professional responsibility for pro bono publico service, including provision of legal services to clients in need and other contributions to the public good. In keeping with this tradition of public service, the faculty of the University of Maine School of Law adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard that encourages each student to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service and/or law-related community service prior to graduation.

The following members of the Class of 2021 have met this aspirational standard, and we gratefully acknowledge and honor their contributions to the public good.

Lawyers have an ethical and professional responsibility for pro bono public service, including provision of legal services to clients in need and other contributions to the public good. In keeping with this tradition of public service, the faculty of the University of Maine School of Law adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard that encourages each student to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service and/or law-related community service prior to graduation.

The following members of the Class of 2021 have met this aspirational standard, and we gratefully acknowledge and honor their contributions to the public good.

The University of Maine School of Law

The University of Maine School of Law is the only law school in Maine, offering the J.D. (Juris Doctor), the post-professional LL.M. (Master of Laws), and the J.S.D. (Doctor of the Science of Law) degrees. Maine Law is committed to educational and scholarly excellence; to justice and the public interest; to professionalism, integrity, and high ethical standards; and to serving as a resource for the entire state. A rigorous core curriculum is augmented by Maine Law’s strengths in environmental and oceans law, intellectual property and technology law, business and commercial law, international law, clinical programs, trial advocacy, and more. Maine Law prepares graduates to succeed in a global economy and to excel in a wide variety of careers in private and public sectors in Maine and throughout the world.

As a public institution, Maine Law takes seriously its responsibilities to the State of Maine and its citizens. Students and faculty advance the economic and social well-being of Maine through extensive research, policy development, clinical programs, internships, externships, and public interest fellowships. Graduates hold prominent leadership positions in law, government, business, and civic society. Located in the beautiful coastal city of Portland, the Law School is accredited by the American Bar Association and is a charter member of the Association of American Law Schools.
